Dear Ms. Burley and Mr. Dixie:

Introduction and Decision

On December 22, 2010, I sent you a letter setting out my decision in response to a question referred to me by the Interior Board of Indian Appeals (IBIA) in California Valley Miwok Tribe v. Pacific Regional Director, Bureau of Indian Affairs, 51 IBIA 103 (January 28, 2010) (IBIA decision). I determined that there was “no need for the BIA to continue its previous efforts to organize the Tribe’s government, because it is organized as a General Council, pursuant to the [1998 General Council Resolution] it adopted at the suggestion of the BIA.” I concluded further that there was “no need for the BIA to continue its previous efforts to ensure that the Tribe confers tribal citizenship upon other individual Miwok Indians in the surrounding area.”

I issued my December decision without providing the parties a formal opportunity to brief me on the facts and issues as they saw them. As a result of subsequent actions by both parties, I determined to withdraw the December decision, and, on April 8, 2011, I requested briefing from the parties. Counsel for the parties provided detailed responses with numerous exhibits. I appreciate the time and effort that went into providing these responses. I have considered them carefully.

Based on the litigation records in the prior Federal court actions in both California and Washington, D.C., the proceedings before the Department’s Interior Board of Indian Appeals, and the material submitted in response to my April 8 letter, I now find the following:

- (1) The California Valley Miwok Tribe (CVMT) is a federally recognized tribe, and has been continuously recognized by the United States since at least 1916;
- (2) At the present date, the citizenship of the CVMT consists solely of Yakima Dixie, Silvia Burley, Rashel Reznor, Anjelica Paulk, and Tristian Wallace;

- (3) The CVMT today operates under a General Council form of government, pursuant to Resolution #CG-98-01, which the CVMT passed in 1998, facilitated by representatives of the Bureau of Indian Affairs (Bureau or BIA)(1998 General Council Resolution);
- (4) Pursuant to the 1998 General Council Resolution, the CVMT's General Council is vested with the governmental authority of the Tribe, and may conduct the full range of government-to-government relations with the United States;
- (5) Although this current General Council form of government does not render CVMT an "organized" tribe under the Indian Reorganization Act (IRA) (see e.g., 25 U.S.C. 476(a) and (d)), as a federally recognized tribe it is not required "to organize" in accord with the procedures of the IRA (25 U.S.C. § 476(h));
- (6) Under the IRA, as amended, it is impermissible for the Federal government to treat tribes not "organized" under the IRA differently from those "organized" under the IRA (25 U.S.C. §§ 476(f)-(h)); and
- (7) As discussed in more detail below, with respect to finding (6), on this particular legal point, I specifically diverge with a key underlying rationale of past decisions by Department of the Interior (Department) officials dealing with CVMT matters, apparently beginning around 2004, and decide to pursue a different policy direction.¹ Under the circumstances of this case, it is inappropriate to invoke the Secretary's broad authority to manage "all Indian affairs and [] all matters arising out of Indian relations," 25 U.S.C. § 2, or any other broad-based authority, to justify interfering with the CVMT's internal governance. Such interference would run counter to the bedrock Federal Indian law principles of tribal sovereignty and tribal self-government, according to which the tribe, as a distinct political entity, may "manag[e] its own affairs and govern[] itself," Cherokee Nation v. Georgia, 30 U.S. 1, 16 (1832); and would conflict with this Administration's clear commitment to protect and honor tribal sovereignty.

Obviously, the December 2010 decision, and today's reaffirmation of that decision, mark a 180-degree change of course from positions defended by this Department in administrative and judicial proceedings over the past seven years. This change is driven by a straightforward correction in the Department's understanding of the California Valley Miwok Tribe's citizenship and a different policy perspective on the Department's legal obligations in light of those facts.

As discussed below, the BIA clearly understood in 1998 that the acknowledged CVMT citizens had the right to exercise the Tribe's inherent sovereign power in a manner they chose. It is unfortunate that soon after the 1998 General Council Resolution was enacted, an intra-tribal leadership dispute erupted, and both sides of the dispute found, at various points in time in the intervening years, that it served their respective interests to raise the theory that the BIA had a duty to protect the rights of approximately 250 "potential citizens" of the Tribe. A focus on that theory has shaped the BIA's and the Department's position on the citizenship question ever since. By contrast, today's decision clears away the misconceptions that these individuals have inchoate citizenship rights that the Secretary has a duty to protect. They do not. The Tribe is not comprised of both citizens and potential citizens. Rather, the five acknowledged citizens are the only citizens of the Tribe, and the General Council of the Tribe has the exclusive authority to determine the citizenship criteria for the Tribe. Santa Clara Pueblo v. Martinez, 436 U.S. 49, 57 (1978). I believe this change in the Department's position is the most suitable means of resolving this decade-long dispute and is in accord with principles of administrative law. Nat'l Cable & Telecomms. Ass'n v. Brand X Internet Servs., 545 U.S. 967 (2005).

Background

This decision is necessitated by a long and complex tribal leadership dispute that resulted in extensive administrative and judicial litigation. Much of the factual background is set out in the prior decisions, so it is not necessary to repeat or even summarize all of it here.

The history of this Tribe, and the record of this case to date, demonstrates the following:

- The CVMT is a federally recognized tribe, 74 Fed. Reg. 40,218, 40,219 (Aug. 11, 2009);
- In 1916, the United States purchased approximately 0.92 acres in Calaveras County, California, for the benefit of 12 named Indians living on the Sheepranch Rancheria (now Sheep Ranch)(Rancheria) (51 IBIA at 106);
- The Indian Agent, who in 1915 recommended the purchase of the 0.92 acres, described the group of 12 named individuals as “the remnant of once quite a large band of Indians in former years living in and near the old decaying mining town known and designated on the map as ‘Sheepranch.’” Id.;
- The record shows only one adult Indian lived on the Rancheria in 1935, a Jeff Davis, who voted “in favor of the IRA” Id.;
- In 1966, the record shows only one adult Indian, Mabel Hodge Dixie, Yakima Dixie’s mother, lived on the Rancheria, when the BIA crafted a plan for distribution of tribal assets pursuant to the California Rancheria Act of 1958, Pub. L. No. 85-671, 72 Stat. 619, as amended by Act of Aug. 11, 1964, Pub. L. No. 88-419, 78 Stat. 390;
- Mabel Hodge Dixie was to be the sole distributee of tribal assets under the 1966 Rancheria distribution plan;
- While the Bureau initiated the process to terminate the Tribe, it never declared the Tribe terminated and has never treated the Tribe as if it had been terminated;
- In 1994, Yakima Dixie wrote the BIA asking for assistance with home repairs and describing himself as “the only descendant and recognized . . . member of the Tribe.” (51 IBIA at 107);
- At some point during the 1990s, Silvia Burley “contacted BIA for information related to her Indian heritage, which BIA provided, and by 1998—at BIA’s suggestion—Burley had contacted Yakima[]” Dixie (as the IBIA has noted, “it appears that Burley may trace her ancestry to a ‘Jeff Davis’ who was listed on the 1913 census. . . .”) 51 IBIA at 107, including footnote 7;
- On August 5, 1998, Mr. Dixie “signed a statement accepting Burley as an enrolled member of the Tribe, and also enrolling Burley’s two daughters and her granddaughter.” Id.;

- The Tribe was not organized pursuant to the IRA prior to 1998 and did not have organic documents setting out its form of government or criteria for tribal citizenship;
- In September of 1998, BIA staff met with Mr. Dixie and Ms. Burley “to discuss organizing the Tribe,” and on September 24, 1998 sent follow-up correspondence recommending that, “given the small size of the Tribe, we recommend that the Tribe operate as a General Council,” which could elect or appoint a chairperson and conduct business. Id. at 108;
- On November 5, 1998, Mr. Dixie and Ms. Burley signed a resolution establishing a General Council, which consisted of all adult citizens of the Tribe, to serve as the governing body of the Tribe. Id. at 109;
- Less than five months later, leadership disputes arose between Mr. Dixie and Ms. Burley—and those conflicts have continued to the present day;²
- Initially the BIA recognized Mr. Dixie as Chairman, but later recognized Ms. Burley as Chairperson based primarily upon the April 1999 General Council action appointing Ms. Burley as Chairperson - an action concurred in by Mr. Dixie. Id.;
- Mr. Dixie later challenged Ms. Burley’s 1999 appointment;
- In 2002, Ms. Burley filed suit in the name of the Tribe alleging that the Department had breached its trust responsibility to the Tribe by distributing the assets of the Rancheria to a single individual, Mabel Dixie, when the Tribe had a potential citizenship of “nearly 250 people[.]” See Complaint for Injunctive and Declaratory Relief at 1, Cal. Valley Miwok Tribe v. United States, No. 02-0912 (E.D. Cal. Apr. 29, 2002);
- In March, 2004, the BIA Superintendent rejected a proposed constitution from Ms. Burley because she had not involved the “whole tribal community” in the governmental organization process;
- On February 11, 2005, the Acting Assistant Secretary – Indian Affairs issued a decision on Mr. Dixie’s 1999 appeal, ruling that the appeal of the Bureau’s 1999 decision to recognize Ms. Burley as Chairperson was moot and that the BIA would recognize Ms. Burley only as a person of authority within the Tribe;
- Ms. Burley sued in D.C. District Court challenging the February 2005 decision;
- After the District Court dismissed her challenge, Cal. Valley Miwok Tribe v. United States, 424 F.Supp. 2d 197 (D.D.C. 2006), the D. C. Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed, Cal. Valley Miwok Tribe v. United States, 515 F.3d 1262 (D.C. Cir. 2008);
- In January 2010, the IBIA rejected Ms. Burley’s appeal objecting to, among other matters, the Superintendent’s decision to continue to assist the Tribe in organizing its government according to the IRA because it viewed the matter as “effectively and functionally a tribal enrollment dispute,” and then referred the matter to me on jurisdictional grounds.

In response to the Board’s referral, I issued my December 22, 2010 decision letter. I intended that decision to resolve the citizenship question referred to me by the IBIA by finding that the current Tribe’s citizenship consisted of the five acknowledged citizens noted above and recognizing the Tribe’s General Council as a tribal government with which the United States may conduct government-to-government relations. Almost immediately, Mr. Dixie filed suit in the D.C. District Court challenging that decision. Recognizing the complex and fundamental nature of the underlying issues, and because I desired the benefit of submissions from the interested parties, I set aside that decision and requested formal briefing.

² I note that the Department repeatedly has offered to assist in mediating this dispute—to no avail. The amount of time and resources focused on these disputes reflects poorly on all the parties, and they must be mindful that continuing this imprudent dispute risks potential adverse consequences well beyond the Tribe and its citizens.

The submissions by the parties in response to my request were thorough. I have carefully reviewed the submissions and find they were most helpful in enhancing my understanding of the parties' positions.

Analysis

It is clear to me that the heart of this matter is a misapprehension about the nature and extent of the Secretary's role, if any, in determining tribal citizenship of a very small, uniquely situated tribe. Related to this issue is the Tribe's current reluctance to "organize" itself under the IRA, choosing instead to avail itself of the provisions in 25 U.S.C. § 476(h), first enacted in 2004, which recognizes the inherent sovereign powers of tribes "to adopt governing documents under procedures other than those specified . . . [in the IRA.]"

Applicability of General Legal Authorities of the Secretary of the Interior in Indian Affairs

The D.C. Circuit viewed § 476(h) as ambiguous, and then granted Chevron deference to the then-Secretary's interpretation of that provision. 513 F.3d at 1266-68. The D.C. Circuit put great weight on the Secretary's broad authority over Indian affairs under 25 U.S.C. § 2, writing that "[w]e have previously held that this extensive grant of authority gives the Secretary broad power to carry out the federal government's unique responsibilities with respect to Indians." Id. at 1267, citations omitted. In addition to § 2, 25 U.S.C. §§ 9, and 13, and 43 U.S.C. § 1457, are often cited as the main statutory bases for the Department's general authority in Indian affairs. Cal. Valley Miwok Tribe v. United States, 424 F.Supp. 2d 197, 201 (D.D.C. 2006); see also COHEN'S HANDBOOK OF FEDERAL INDIAN LAW § 5.03[2] at 405 (2005 ed.) [hereinafter COHEN]. The D.C. Circuit also cited two cases involving separate bands of the Seminole Nation for the general propositions that the United States has an "obligation" "to promote a tribe's political integrity" as well as "the responsibility to ensure that [a tribe's] representatives, with whom [it] must conduct government-to-government relations, are valid representatives of the [tribe] as a whole." 513 F.3d at 1267 (emphasis added by the Court), citing, Seminole Nation v. United States, 313 U.S. 286, 296 (1942), and Seminole Nation of Oklahoma v. Norton, 223 F.Supp. 2d 122, 140 (D.D.C. 2002).

In my view, prior Department officials misapprehended their responsibility when they: (1) took their focus off the fact that the CVMT was comprised a five individuals, and (2) mistakenly viewed the Federal government as having particular duties relating to individuals who were not citizens of the tribe. I decline to invoke the broad legal authorities cited above to further intrude into internal tribal citizenship and governance issues in the instant case. In making this decision, I also am mindful of the Supreme Court's recent guidance concerning: (1) the importance of identifying "specific rights creating or duty-imposing statutory or regulatory prescriptions" before concluding the United States is obligated to act in a particular manner in Indian affairs, and (2) the central role Federal policy plays in administering Indian affairs. United States v. Jicarilla Apache Nation, 131 S. Ct. 2313, 2323-24, 2326-27 (June 13, 2011).

Application of Specific Legal Authorities

In my view, prior Department officials (from 2003 to the present) fundamentally misunderstood the role of the Federal government in addressing the CVMT citizenship and governance issues: (1) they misunderstood and ignored the legal authority of CVMT to govern itself through its General Council structure without being compelled to “organize” under the IRA; and (2) they confused the Federal government’s obligations to possible tribal citizens with those owed to actual tribal citizens.

The February 11, 2005, decision of Acting Assistant Secretary – Indian Affairs Michael D. Olsen stated that, until the Tribe organized itself, the Department could not recognize anyone as the Tribe’s Chairperson, and that the “first step in organizing the Tribe is identifying the putative tribal members.” (2005 Decision at 1-2, discussed in 51 IBIA at 112). The D.C. Circuit, after citing the Secretary’s broad authority under 25 U.S.C. § 2, endorsed this approach as a reasonable interpretation of 25 U.S.C. § 476(h) because “[t]he exercise of this authority is especially vital when, as is the case here, the government is determining whether a tribe is organized, and the receipt of significant federal benefits turns on the decision.” 515 F.3d at 1267. As I have stated above, I reject as contrary to § 476(h) the notions that a tribe can be compelled to “organize” under the IRA and that a tribe not so organized can have “significant federal benefits” withheld from it. Either would be a clear violation of 25 U.S.C. § 476(f).

The CVMT currently consists of the five citizens identified above. Under the current facts, the Department does not have a legitimate role in attempting to force the Tribe to expand its citizenship.³ Department officials previously referred to “the importance of participation of a greater tribal community in determining citizenship criteria.” (Superintendent’s 2004 Decision at 3, discussed in 51 IBIA at 111-112). The D.C. Circuit, referring to the Tribe’s governance structure that arguably would maintain a limited citizenship, stated “[t]his antimajoritarian gambit deserves no stamp of approval from the Secretary.” 515 F.3d at 1267. However, I know of no specific statutory or regulatory authority that warrants such intrusion into a federally recognized tribe’s internal affairs. (As to the more general sources of authority cited in support of Federal oversight of tribal matters, I have explained my views on the proper scope of those authorities above). “Courts have consistently recognized that one of an Indian tribe’s most basic powers is the authority to determine questions of its own membership.” Santa Clara Pueblo v. Martinez, 436 U.S. 49, 57, 72 n.32 (1978); United States v. Wheeler, 435 U.S., 313, 322 n.18 (1978); COHEN § 3.03[3] at 176, citations omitted. “[I]f the issue for which the determination is important involves internal affairs of the Indian nation, it is more consistent with principles of tribal sovereignty to defer to that nation’s definition.” Id. at 180. As discussed in the previous paragraph, I also believe that, based on an incorrect interpretation of § 476(h), the previous Administration’s views on the IRA’s application to this case were erroneous and led to an improper focus on expanding the size of the Tribe and altering the form of its government.

Mr. Dixie invokes the Alan-Wilson IBIA cases to support the theory that the Secretary has a duty to ensure that the potential citizens are involved in the organization of an unorganized, but federally recognized tribe.⁴ 30 IBIA 241. But, in fact, Alan-Wilson works directly against Mr. Dixie's position, and this distinction provides additional support for my decision. Unlike CVMT, the Cloverdale Rancheria was a federally recognized tribe terminated under the California Rancheria Act. It was later restored pursuant to the Tillie Hardwick litigation and settlement, which required the Rancheria to organize its tribal government under the IRA.

30 IBIA 241, 248.

My review of the history of the CVMT compels the conclusion set out in the December decision and reaffirmed here: the CVMT has been continuously recognized, and its political relationship with the Federal government has not been terminated. The five acknowledged citizens are the only current citizens of the Tribe, and the Tribe's General Council is authorized to exercise the Tribe's governmental authority. In this case, again, the factual record is clear: there are only five citizens of CVMT. The Federal government is under no duty or obligation to "potential citizens" of the CVMT. Those potential citizens, if they so desire, should take up their cause with the CVMT General Council directly.

Given both parties' acknowledgment of the existence of other individuals who could potentially become tribal citizens, the Department's prior positions are understandable. The Department endeavored to engage both parties in a resolution of the tribal citizenship issues, including offers of assistance from the Department's Office of Collaborative Action and Dispute Resolution (CADR) – to no avail. By the time this matter was referred to me by the IBIA in January 2010, serious doubts existed about the likelihood of the parties ever being able to work together to resolve the issues involving the citizenship and governance of the Tribe.

Absent an express commitment from the parties to formally define tribal citizenship criteria, any further effort by the Department to do so would result in an unwarranted intrusion into the internal affairs of the Tribe. Moreover, given the unfortunate history of this case, most likely such efforts would not succeed in accomplishing this objective. While there may be rare circumstances in which such an intrusion would be warranted in order for the Secretary to discharge specific responsibilities, no such specific law or circumstances exist here.

Accordingly, unless asked by the CVMT General Council, the Department will make no further efforts to assist the Tribe to organize and define its citizenship. I accept the Resolution #GC-98-01 as the interim governing document of the Tribe, and as the basis for resuming government-to-government relations between the United States and the Tribe.

While I appreciate that the General Council Resolution may prove lacking as to certain aspects of tribal governance, I also recognize that this tribe is very small and uniquely situated. Many tribes have been able to govern effectively with limited or no written governing documents.

⁴ Mr. Dixie also invokes the case of Seminole Nation of Oklahoma v. Norton, 223 F.Supp.2d 122 (D.D.C. 2002) in support of his position. Seminole Nation involved a dispute where a particular faction of the Tribe asserted rights to tribal citizenship under an 1866 treaty. Id. at 138. There is no overriding treaty or congressional enactment governing tribal citizenship at issue in this dispute.

Conclusion

Based upon the foregoing analysis, I re-affirm the following:

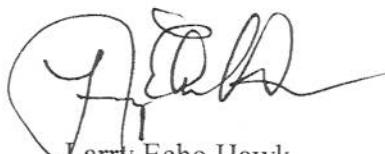

- CVMT is a federally recognized tribe whose entire citizenship, as of this date, consists of the five acknowledged citizens;
- The 1998 Resolution established a General Council form of government, comprised of all the adult citizens of the Tribe, with whom the Department may conduct government-to-government relations;
- The Department shall respect the validly enacted resolutions of the General Council; and
- Only upon a request from the General Council will the Department assist the Tribe in refining or expanding its citizenship criteria, or developing and adopting other governing documents.

In my December 2010 decision letter I rescinded several earlier decisions. I am persuaded that such attempts to rewrite history are fraught with the risk of unintended consequences. Past actions, undertaken in good faith and in reliance on the authority of prior Agency decisions, should not be called into question by today's determination that those prior Agency decisions were erroneous. Thus, today's decision shall apply prospectively.

This decision is final for the Department and effective immediately, but implementation shall be stayed pending resolution of the litigation in the District Court for the District of Columbia, California Valley Miwok Tribe v. Salazar, C.A. No. 1:11-cv-00160-RWR (filed 03/16/11).

Finally, I strongly encourage the parties to work within the Tribe's existing government structure to resolve this longstanding dispute and bring this contentious period in the Tribe's history to a close.

Sincerely,

Larry Echo Hawk
