Commissioner Indian Affairs,

Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

The hereto attached census of the Indians designated "Sheepbranch-Indians" only aggregating 13 in number, constitutes the remnant of once quite a large band of Indians in former years living in and near the old decaying mining town known and designated on the map as "Sheepbranch". Though once a very prosperous mining town now is most conspicuous on account of its decline and decay. There are more old vacant houses, both business and resident, than those occupied; the best of course being the once occupied.

I drove over to Sheepbranch from Murpheys, that I might be more sure of a correct census and general line-up of the Indians, though on arriving there found all the old little Indian cabins, only three in number locked and Indians away. Their white neighbors supposed them some where on the nearby streams panning for gold. Learning that Peter Hodge, the leading member of this little band, was working about 5 miles to the north in or near a sawmill, made an effort to find him, but failed as he was too deep in the forests cutting logs to be found in the limited time. I returned to Sheepbranch via of his home, which is located about $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles north of Sheepbranch where I found his wife, two daughters and son, through whom I am reasonably sure I secured them a correct census, as hereto attached. Hodges 160 acres was homesteaded by him 5 or 6 years since, is extremely rough, having only about one acre of land that is worth while to attempt to cultivate, and which he has in a splendid garden orchard and berry patch. His house is a small one room typical little Indian cabin. Hodge has built near a small spring of sufficient volume to water his garden, orchard and vines and domestic uses. Quite a bold running creek runs through the east boundary of his 180 acres.

His land is so exceedingly rough, poor and inaccessible as to render same, in my opinion, more of a burden and than a blessing. His wife informed me that he only comes home from his work at the mill on Saturday nights returning on Mondays to his work. His land is even too rough for value as to grazing. Possibly it may have some hog-range value.

By reason of the long and strong attachment ~~and~~ of this small band to Sheepranch, the fact that the country to the S., S.W. and W. has developed into considerable farming and fruit country, giving promise for permanent employment nearby for these Indians, and that in the old town a number of old improved places of one to two acres with more or less orchards and vines may be purchased cheap, would suggest, if possible to do so, one or two of such places be purchased for these Indians.

In furtherance of this suggestion I am by even date herewith writing Mrs. Wm. Moyle of Stockton, Calif. who I am informed owns and will likely sell one or possibly two of such places. I have in mind two such places I inspected while at Sheepranch that will fairly well meet the requirements of this little band which I have been led to believe may be purchased for not exceeding $400-00, possibly not over $300-00.

Very respectfully,

John J. ...
Special Indian Agent.

N-B. The two Indians, 'Abe Lincoln' & 'Jeff Davis' (Abe at Murpheys & Jeff at Sheepranch were christened their respective names by the early miners during the progress of the civil war, they then being quite chunks of boys spending much of their time around the mining camps.)
